

Taking the GMAT can be one of the biggest obstacles in applying to an MBA program. Therefore, to help you overcome this potential hurdle, we have compiled this list of free resources. We have found that by providing prospective candidates with this information, it prepares them to be successful on the exam! Contact the UofL MBA Office with any questions via telephone 502-852-7257 or email mba@louisville.edu.

General Information about the GMAT

MBA.com

- Learn about the test structure
- Watch preparatory tips
- Download free software
- Schedule your appointment for the test

BeatTheGMAT.com

- Self-study plans (30 days, 60 days, 90 days, etc.)
- Advice from fellow test takers
- Free resources

Practice, Practice, Practice

UofL Free GMAT Workshops

- Attend the UofL College of Business Free GMAT Workshops
- Offered monthly
- Visit UofLMBA.com to register

MBA.com

- Download free exams and practice!

Other Resources

- GMAT Avengers Guide - Contact the MBA Office and request it today!
- KhanAcademy.org/test-prep/gmat
- MBAMath.com
- GMATprepnw.com

“As an international student from Jordan and with English being my second language, the GMAT seemed to be intimidating at first. But, all you need is patience, persistence, perseverance, and a smart and strategic study plan. I was a full-time employee and had completed my Bachelor degree 10 years before I started studying for the GMAT. So, there were times of frustration and sometimes I just wanted to give up! But I kept reminding myself that this test is only my first step towards building, or even changing, my career and that there will be harder tests that I will have to take in my professional and personal life. You will discover later on that the GMAT actually prepared you for challenging courses in the UofL MBA program such as finance, statistics, and accounting. Finally, the more you put your heart and mind into it, the easier it will become! Anyone can do it, but not anyone can be a distinguished MBA student. Your dedication in studying for the GMAT will continue to reward you in the long run!”

Tala Tahboub
UofL MBA Class of 2017